

Level 5 Certificate in Principles of Commissioning for Wellbeing (RQF)

The first nationally recognised qualification for Commissioners developed and delivered by Commissioners and People who use Services.

National Learning Disability and Autism Programme

The Level 5 Certificate in Principles of Commissioning for Wellbeing qualification has been developed and is awarded by Highfield Awarding Body for Compliance (HABC) Limited. It sits on the Regulated Qualifications Framework (RQF) which means it's an English qualification regulated by the Office of Qualifications and Examinations Regulation (Ofqual).

Qualification Overview

This particular delivery programme sets the qualification specifically within a learning disability and autism context. It introduces the principles of commissioning for wellbeing to new commissioners and enables more experienced commissioners to review and update their knowledge.

The Certificate in Principles of Commissioning for Well Being was co-designed by commissioners, people who use services and providers, with the opportunity for effective integrated working in mind.

The qualification programme contains the following units:

- Unit 1 – The role of the commissioner for wellbeing
- Unit 2 – Commissioning together for outcomes
- Unit 3 – The commissioning cycle
- Unit 4 – Professional development for effective commissioning

Delivery

The programme tackles the challenge of defining and delivering wellbeing outcomes in an increasingly complex environment. It emphasises not only the importance of each stage of the commissioning cycle, but also unpicks the legislative requirements to manage the market effectively, and considers the role of stakeholders while placing people at the heart of the process.

It is delivered by Hasca through:

- A great team of mentor/assessors - all experienced former commissioners
- A great team of lived experience and Carer co-trainers
- An innovative programme including assignment opportunities to support your current and future commissioning challenges
- A growing programme of masterclasses from leading individuals and organisations
